Why Being One School Is So Cool!

On Wednesday Richard came down stairs saying they needed a child to be part of some filming - could I think of anyone who might be interested? Right in front of me was Honor, a brand new year 3 who had said in her IEM she loved acting. She spent 20 minutes upstairs having an awesome experience and came back buzzing. Junior child's needs met, senior classes needs met. Win-win! Loving this.

Mel was doing a one to one with Esther who was planning her first ever inquiry. She and Esther came to share with me her great ideas about what she would do while inquiring about lizards. I mentioned I used to get blue tongued lizards in my backyard as a kid in Aussie. This triggered Mel's memory that Monty, a senior, owns Trevor, the blue tongued lizard. In the process of asking Esther if she would like to interview Monty, who should walk past but Monty himself. He quickly agreed to be interviewed once Esther had her questions ready and then offered to bring Trevor in. How cool is that?
